Dave Rattray Visits Classmates.

These old friends are looking pretty young!

I had a great time this past autumn with trips to see old friends in Wisconsin and the west side of Cleveland -- including Ken Jurgens, Bruce Michael, and Bill Rolf, who you old-timers will remember as a member of our class until he crossed the Nickel Plate tracks and finished his schooling in Westlake.

I returned home to catch my breath for about a month before driving to Texas to see Barry Shea. Barry and his wife Sarah own a beautiful resort in New Braunfels, Texas. It is on the clear spring fed Comal River which is popular for tubing in the Texas summer. You can see more of it at their website called www.theotherplaceresort.com.

New Braunfels is a German town about halfway between Austin and San Antonio. With so many Germans around the town just has to have some sort of beer, sausage, and polka party which will last about a week at the beginning of each November, draws throngs of people and is called Wurstfest.

This being my first trip to Texas, Barry made sure I got to see the sights, which included the Alamo.

But the best part of the trip was just getting to see Barry and renewing an old friendship. By saying “renewing” I don’t mean to imply that it had ever “expired”. You all know what I mean. We grow up with great friends and then all go our separate ways. We are very lucky when we can meet again and discover why we were friends so long ago.

Thank you to Barry and his family for making me feel so at home with them and to everyone else I visited this past autumn no matter how short the visit.

Please, you all stay healthy and I hope to see everyone at this year’s reunion.
